

Board Profile: Milton J. Little, Jr.

Introduction:

Milton J. Little, Jr. is a trailblazing leader with a remarkable track record in community advocacy and philanthropy across nonprofit, for profit, and government. As the first African-American president of United Way of Greater Atlanta, one of the largest in the national system, he assumed this role in July 2007 and has since played a pivotal role in raising over half a billion dollars for local community needs and priorities. With a wealth of experience and expertise in nonprofit management, Little has made significant contributions to various organizations, including the National Urban League, where he served as the chief operating officer and interim president and CEO.

Professional Background:

Milton J. Little, Jr. brings a strong academic foundation to his leadership with a magna cum laude degree in sociology from Morehouse College and an M.A. in urban sociology and social policy from Columbia University. His commitment to community development and social impact has led him to serve on multiple boards and advisory committees, leaving an indelible mark on organizations such as the Center for Assessment and Policy Development. He holds prominent positions, including Board chair of Community and Southern Bank, the Southern Education Foundation, Finance Chair of MDRC, a national policy research think tank, and vice chair of the board of directors for Ways to Work.

Vision and Philanthropy:

Milton J. Little, Jr.'s vision revolves around creating a positive and lasting impact on communities by addressing their most pressing needs. Through his exceptional leadership at United Way of Greater Atlanta and his role in various boards and committees, he is dedicated to fostering equitable access to education, healthcare, and opportunities for all. His philanthropic endeavors demonstrate a commitment to uplift underprivileged communities, empowering them to achieve greater heights and improving overall well-being.

Professional Experience:

President, United Way of Greater Atlanta (June 2007 - Present)

President, United Way of Massachusetts Bay (2004 - 2007)

Executive Vice President, National Urban League (1997 - 2003)

Education:

Morehouse College, BA Sociology (1972 - 1976)

Columbia University, MA Sociology (1976 - 1978)

Philosophy and Vision:

Milton J. Little, Jr.'s transformative leadership is fueled by a steadfast commitment to community advocacy and philanthropy. As the first African-American president of United Way of Greater Atlanta, he has spearheaded efforts to raise over half a billion dollars for local community needs, making a lasting impact on underserved populations. Driven by his vision of creating a more equitable society, Little leverages his expertise in nonprofit management to champion social impact initiatives. His dedication to fostering access to education, healthcare, and opportunities for all is evident through his involvement in various boards and committees. Milton J. Little, Jr.'s philanthropic endeavors serve as a catalyst for empowering underprivileged communities and improving overall well-being, making him a valuable asset to any board seeking transformative leadership and sustainable social change.

Summary:

Milton J. Little, Jr.'s transformative leadership in community advocacy and philanthropy has made him an instrumental force in driving positive change. His groundbreaking role as the first African-American president of United Way of Greater Atlanta and his notable contributions to various boards and committees showcase his dedication to advancing social equity and uplifting underserved communities. Milton J. Little, Jr.'s vision and commitment to philanthropy make him a valuable asset to any board seeking transformative leadership and sustainable social impact.